Ford paints Tory as spoiled elitist

Doug's debut debate.
Chow pulls rivals back on topic; all three exalt benefits of transit plans

SMITH CROSS
jessica.smithcross@metronews.ca

Doug Ford spent much of his first mayoral debate at York Memorial Collegiate Institute characterizing frontrunner
John Tory as an elitist.

Answering the first question Tuesday evening — what separates the candidates from each other — Doug Ford said he was the only one who supports building “subways, subways, subways.”

He then took a shot at Olivia Chow and Tory, claiming he is the only one willing to stand up against the “special interests working on their campaigns.”

“You two live downtown; you’ve got subways. It’s about fair and equitable transit across the city, not a two-tiered system,” said Ford.

Ford, whose father was an MPP and left him a successful business, attacked Tory by calling him an elitist.

“Outside of this election, when have you actually gone into Toronto Community Housing?” he asked.

When Tory replied by mentioning several occasions,
Ford said he hadn’t seen him.

During a section of the debate on affordable childcare, Ford told Tory that no Toronto mayor has ever been elected without serving on council first — but Tory is used to getting what he wants.

“I know you’re used to getting everything handed to you with a silver platter,” he said.

Tory retorted that Ford’s poor attendance at council meetings was “a disgrace.”

Chow reminded both that the question they were asked

Olivia Chow, Doug Ford and John Tory in a lively mayoral debate Tuesday. CHRIS YOUNG/THE CANADIAN PRESS was about affordable childcare.

The candidates were asked about youth violence in a question that referenced Hamid Aminzada, who was stabbed to death at his school that afternoon.

All of the candidates gave their condolences.

“They need mentorship and also they need a job to put money in their pocket and keep busy,” said Ford.

Tory replied that there has been a toll disproportionately taken on young black and minority men. He also said that youth needed jobs and his SmartTrack plan would help “bring jobs to those people, to those neighbourhoods.”

“We need to look at the root causes,” said Chow, noting that Aminzada was from Rexdale and that her bus plan would serve his area best.

The audience at the debate frequently yelled over the candidates.

A scuffle broke out before the candidates arrived. Someone crumpled a poster held by audience member Genevieve Tran that depicted Rob and Doug Ford as Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dum.

The debate took a quick hiatus while police turfed protester Iola Fon-tino, who started shouting about bibles in schools and homophobic things about the Pride parade.

One heckler told Chow to “go back to China.”

GTA homebuyers prize walkability over size

Survey. Data shows growing number say they'd live in a less car-dependent area if they could afford it

The dream of home ownership in the Toronto region is evolving, with more home buyers prioritizing a walkable neighbourhood over floor space.

An Environics survey for RBC and the Pembina Institute confirms that most people prefer it when even suburban neighbourhoods function like cities, with easy access to transit, shops and services.

The 2014 Home Location Preference Survey, being published Wednesday, confirms that the vast majority of home buyers — 81 per cent — would choose less car-dependent neighbourhoods over big lawns and extra bedrooms — if cost were not a factor.

Seniors, and adults aged 18 to 35 were most likely to prefer more walkable, transit-oriented locations. Those

Home price a factor

- Affordability is a growing factor in home-buying decisions, says the survey, which found 82 per cent of respondents said they live where they do because that's what they can afford. A growing number of respondents — 45 per cent — said affordability affected their choice "a lot." That's up slightly from 41 per cent two years ago.

respondents said they would pay more to live in that kind of neighbourhood even if it meant downsizing their home.

Also, larger families with three or more children showed a growing interest in more walkable neighbourhoods. Some 51 per cent of those respondents said they would prefer a walk-friendly suburb, up from 40 per cent in 2012.

Two years ago, most large families said they wanted a big house and yard regardless of cost, said Pembina's Ontario director, Cherise Burda. Now, they're more willing to give up some space to be closer to conveniences.

That change, she said, shows "people are frustrated with having to take such long commutes, and the trade-offs (in terms of smaller homes) may be worth that," she said.

"We know the millennials are rejecting the car-dependent suburbs of their parents and they want to be where the action is, they want to walk," said Burda.

Businesses that had migrated to the cheaper suburbs are now moving back into transit-friendly areas to attract young workers.

The big question is whether young couples will stay in their condos once they have children, she said.

"It's going to depend on how development plays out. People are going to buy what's available, what's affordable," said Burda.

The online survey of 1,014 Toronto area residents was conducted by Environics Research Group between May 20 and 27. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Polaris winner urges crowd to wear, eat seal

Tanya Tagaq. Her record Animism beat out Drake and past winners Arcade Fire and Owen Pallett

Nunavut-reared throat singer Tanya Tagaq claimed the $30,000 Polaris Music Prize on Monday night, then used her acceptance speech to support the wearing and eating of seal — and lob an expletive at People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals.

Tagaq's record Animism beat out higher-profile offerings from the likes of Drake and past winners Arcade Fire and Owen Pallett for the award, given to the best Canadian album of the past year as determined by a group of journalists.

Host Jay Baruchel fell to his knees and fanned his arms toward her in admiration as she took the stage.

After thanking her producer and family, Tagaq shifted into an impassioned "side note."

"People should wear and eat seal as much as possible because if you can imagine an indigenous culture thriving and surviving on a sustainable resource, wearing seal and eating it, it's delicious and there's lots of them.

"And f— PETA," she added.

Reached Tuesday, a representative from PETA argued that Tagaq's anger against the organization was misplaced.

"PETA was surprised by Tanya's ill-informed rant because we've never campaigned against the indigenous hunt," Dan Mathews, PETA's senior vice-president of campaigns, said in a statement.

"Our fight is — and always has been — against the East Coast commercial slaughter, which is run by white people who bilk Canadians for millions in tax dollars in order to prop up the non-existent seal trade. The international bans that PETA has successfully lobbied for, such as in Europe, exempt indigenous hunts."

2015 Pan Am and Parapan Am. Ontario pumps $74M more into Games

Ontario's cash-strapped governing Liberals are pumping another $74 million into the 2015 Pan Am and Parapan Am Games, but say they're confident they won't need to turn on the tap again.

TO2015, the organizing committee, asked for the money as it ramps up preparations for the Games next summer, which are expected to cost $2.57 billion including transportation, security and the athletes' village.

"I've asked them to really go over their books to figure out exactly what those pressures are, and they are quite confident that this is the first and last time that they'll be asking for additional money," Michael Coteau, the minister responsible for the Games, said Tuesday.

The committee is expecting to bring in $25 million less than planned in sponsorship revenue. It needs $49 million for other things, including providing a live broadcast of some events, expanding the torch relay to other communities, back-up ambulances for athletes and more satellite villages to reduce travel time for participants, they said.

Michael Coteau
TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

The money will also help pay for staffing in areas where there won't be enough volunteers, expanding marketing and communications to promote the Games, security for equipment at venues and higher barricades around the athletes' village and Pan Am park.

But the committee also found $45 million in savings in other areas, so the overall increase will be $29 million, Coteau said. The province plans to hold back $30 million of the $1.6 billion it's spending on the Games until organizers can meet revenue targets and get "further support from other partners." EV-D68

Rare respiratory virus spreading across Ontario

A vicious respiratory virus that sends children to hospital is now spreading across Ontario, with confirmed cases in Windsor, Hamilton, Ottawa and Toronto.

Enterovirus D68 (EV-D68) has been sweeping across the United States since August, infecting hundreds of children and sending the most extreme cases to intensive-care units.

The rare virus recently hit Canada and has so far been confirmed in Alberta, British Columbia and Ontario.

Last week, 14 confirmed cases were reported in the Hamilton region and four at the Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario (CHEO) in Ottawa. This week, two more cases have been confirmed in Windsor and Toronto.

Mild symptoms can include runny nose, fever, coughing and body and muscle aches. Children with a history of asthma and breathing problems are the most vulnerable to the virus.

Columnist goes 1-on-1 with mayoral burgers

I'm no food critic, but I do enjoy a good burger. And I know a thing or two about Toronto municipal politics, which means — as per, I'm pretty sure, some kind of bylaw — I am duly qualified to review the mayoral burgers being served up at the Lakeview Restaurant as part of Metro's Burger Poll. Here's my take, fresh off the grill.

ALL PHOTOS BY LIA GRAINGER/FOR METRO

The Morgan Baskin Burger

When I first heard about Morgan Baskin, Toronto's upstart teenage candidate for mayor, I approached her with some skepticism. I eyed her namesake burger the same way.

But to Baskin and her burger's credit, I came away impressed both times.

Lakeview builds the Baskin burger with two veggie burger patties, then adds a medley of ingredients including barbecue sauce and — no joke — crushed Doritos. As a pretty ardent carnivore, the veggie patties had me concerned. But the combination works, and the burger ended up tasting meaty enough to hang with its beefier competition. And, hey, you get a glass of Cherry Kool-Aid on the side.

The Olivia Chow Burger

I wanted to like the Chow Burger more than I did. It's topped with jack cheese (get it?), a roasted orange pepper and a chow-chow relish that combines a whole bunch of tastes: tomatoes, cabbage, onions and carrots. There's something in the Chow burger for everyone.

But while it was still a pretty impressive burger, in the end I thought it was trying to satisfy too many tastes. Maybe it's just that I'm not a relish fan. If you're into relish, you'll be excited about the Chow Burger. But me, I could have used a little more focus on the beef.

The John Tory Burger

The John Tory Burger takes some risks. It combines beef, blue cheese, blueberry barbecue sauce, fried red onion and tortilla chips. My initial reaction: Shut up, that's a ridiculous list of things to put on a burger.

But I persevered, and I'm glad I did. The blue cheese is fantastic. The tortilla chips give it a satisfying crunch. The sauce makes it all so very messy, but nobody ever stays clean in the world of politics or burger-eating.

It's probably an acquired taste. If the Tory burger doesn't do anything for you the first time, try it four or five more times. It just might win you over, eventually.

The Doug Ford Burger

None of these burgers could be called small, but the Doug Ford Burger is a real monster, featuring beef, bacon, chicken and a side of gravy. It's the kind of burger I'd pretend to laugh about in polite company, scoffing at the mere idea of eating such a thing.

But here's the thing: This burger is actually great. There's no pretense. It's exactly what it looks like: a giant pile of meat and cheese on a bun. Your head and your heart will tell you to stop eating, to move on. But you won't be able to stop. The Doug Ford is a burger that won't quit.

Trudeau shuns Sun Media after 'slut' comments

Justin Trudeau won't be speaking to Sun Media until the outlet provides an "appropriate response" to a television segment by Ezra Levant in which he criticized the Liberal leader's father, Pierre, calling him a "slut."

During a segment last Monday on the Sun News Network program, The Source, right-wing pundit Levant took a swipe at a photo tweeted by the Liberal Party of Canada, showing Justin Trudeau kissing a bride on her left cheek, while she posed for a wedding picture with her bridal party that day.

Levant says the photo is inappropriate, and that Trudeau "invaded" the bride's "personal, intimate day" and turned

This time it's personal

"(Levant's segment) crossed the line by airing a personal attack on the Trudeau family that was offensive, and breached any reasonable measure of editorial integrity."

Kate Purchase, a spokesperson in Justin Trudeau's office her event into something about him.

In the segment, which runs close to five minutes, Levant also calls Trudeau's mother, Margaret, and his father, the late former prime minister, "promiscuous."

Levant also referred to Trudeau's father, former Liberal prime minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, as a "slut" and described how his mother "didn't like to wear panties."

Levant's segment "crossed the line by airing a personal attack on the Trudeau family that was offensive, and breached any reasonable measure of editorial integrity," Kate Purchase, a spokesperson in Justin Trudeau's office, said in a statement Tuesday.

"We have raised this issue with the appropriate people at Quebecor Inc., the owners and operators of Sun News Network, and have asked that they consider an appropriate response. Until the company resolves the matter, the leader of the Liberal Party of Canada, Justin Trudeau, will continue to not engage with Sun Media," she added.

Purchase said the boycott includes Sun reporters.

On Tuesday, Trudeau said in Ottawa that Levant's comments were unacceptable and "beyond the bounds of civil discourse."

In an email to Torstar News Service on Tuesday, Martin Tremblay, a spokesperson for Quebecor, said: "We won't comment on this."

Obama: World must fight 'global threat' of climate change

UN General Assembly.
U.S. president calls on all nations to address what's being called 'the defining issue of our age'

In the first international test for his climate-change strategy, U.S. President Barack Obama pressed world leaders Tuesday to follow the United States' lead on the issue, even as a United Nations summit revealed the many obstacles that still stand in the way of wider agreements.

"The United States has made ambitious investments in clean energy and ambitious reductions in our carbon emissions," Obama said. "Today I call on all countries to join us, not next year or the year after that, but right now. Because no nation can meet this global threat alone."

But none of the pledges made at Tuesday's one-day meeting was binding. The summit, part of the annual UN General Assembly, was designed to lay the groundwork for a new global climate-change treaty. It also revealed the sharp differences that divide countries on matters such as deforestation, carbon pollution and methane leaks from oil and gas production.

"Today we must set the world on a new course," said United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-Moon. "Climate change is the defining issue of our age. It is defining our present. Our response will define our future."

In some ways, the climate summit answered that call.

U.S. President Barack Obama and first lady Michelle Obama arrive at JFK International Airport in New York on Tuesday. The president is in the city for three days of talks with foreign leaders at the United Nations General Assembly. JULIE JACOBSON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The European Union said its member nations next month were set to approve a plan that would cut greenhouse gases back to 40 per cent below 1990 levels by 2030. The EU also called for using renewable energy for 27 per cent of the bloc's power needs and increasing energy efficiency by 30 per cent.

More than 150 countries set the first-ever deadline to end deforestation by 2030, but that goal was thrown into doubt when Brazil said it would not join. Forests are important because they absorb the main greenhouse gas, carbon dioxide. The United States, Canada and the entire European Union signed onto a declaration to halve forest loss by 2020 and eliminate deforestation entirely by 2030.

'Fully committed'

Canada 'taking decisive action'

Canada made two main commitments at the UN climate summit Tuesday. One was to match American vehicle-emissions standards; the other, to curb the use of HFC coolants.

Canada's environment minister said her government would be releasing details on a plan to reduce hydrofluorocarbons.

"Let me be clear, Canada is fully committed to achieving a strong and effective global climate agreement in Paris next year," said the prepared text of Leona Aglukkaq's remarks.

"Both domestically and internationally we are demonstrating this commitment. We are not waiting to act. We are taking decisive action to ensure Canada remains a leader and contributes its part to this global cause." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Experts say a move by Netflix to defy the will of Canada's broadcast regulator calls into question CRTC's very authority to institute any rules governing Internet-based video service providers. ELISE AMENDOLA-AP/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Netflix defies CRTC, and PM gets the blame

Toothless watchdog?

Online video service firm says regulator's orders are not applicable to Netflix under Canadian broadcasting law

One of the hottest dramas to hit the fall season isn't on your TV screen — it's happening behind the scenes in a battle of wills between the country's fastest-growing video supplier and Canada's broadcast regulator.

Netflix has told the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission it won't turn over sensitive corporate information, despite being ordered to do so at a hearing last Friday.

The move calls into question the very authority of the broadcast regulator to institute any rules governing Internet-based video service providers, says new-media expert Michael Geist.

And the Prime Minister's Office is being blamed for forcing the regulator into a corner.

Industry watchers say Netflix is standing up to the CRTC after being emboldened by Prime Minister Stephen Harper, who has said his government will not allow levies against online video services to help pay for production of Canadian content — something he has referred to as a "Netflix tax."

By inappropriately interfering in the CRTC hearings, the Harper Conservatives may have already rendered the regulator toothless, said Opposition heritage critic Pierre Nantel. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two police officers in Portland, Ore., completed the delivery for a pizza delivery driver after he was injured in a crash.

The Pizza Hut driver hurt his neck and back in the collision.

Steve Huckins tells KOIN that he and his wife were concerned Sept. 1 when the officers, Michael Filbert and Royce Curtiss, showed up at their home, but they started laughing when they received the pizza. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Soldiers patrol the Eiffel Tower in Paris on Tuesday. French forces have joined the U.S. in carrying out airstrikes against ISIS militants who have overrun large areas of Syria and Iraq. CHRISTOPHE ENA/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ISIS under attack as airstrikes start

Strongholds targeted. Allied countries against ISIS begin their military campaign with a barrage of 200 strikes, targeting key facilities

The U.S. and Arab allies launched what leaders declared would be a long and sustained military assault against the Islamic State of Iraq and al-Sham's (ISIS) strongholds in Syria and Iraq, while the U.S. simultaneously targeted an al-Qaida cell said to be plotting imminent attacks on American and other Western interests, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

Hours after the barrage of airstrikes began, Lt. Gen. William Mayville said the attacks took out key ISIS training camps and facilities. But he said it was too early to tell if they were able to disrupt a terrorist attack being planned by al-Qaida militants, known as the Khorasan Group. He said the group was "nearing the execution phase" of an attack against Europe or the U.S.

President Barack Obama said that Arab support for the airstrikes "makes it clear to the world this is not America's fight alone."

"We're going to do what's necessary to take the fight to this terrorist group, for the security of the country and the region and for the entire world," Obama said as he left Washington for meetings of the UN General Assembly in New York.

The U.S. and five Arab nations attacked ISIS's headquarters in eastern Syria in nighttime raids consisting of more than 200 airstrikes against approximately a dozen targets.

The airstrikes were part of the expanded military campaign that Obama authorized nearly two weeks ago in order to disrupt and destroy the ISIS militants, who have slaughtered thousands of people, beheaded Westerners — including two American journalists — and captured large swaths of Syria and northern and western Iraq. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canada pledges aid

Canada added its support Tuesday to the American and Arab airstrikes on militant targets inside Syria.

A senior government official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, confirmed Canada has made no military contribution to the air offensive, which for the first time targeted the Islamic State of Iraq and al-Sham (ISIS) on Syrian territory.

Canada has 69 special forces advisers in Iraq and has offered two military transport planes to deliver humanitarian assistance to displaced civilians and weapons to the Kurdish Peshmerga fighters in northern Iraq, who are facing ISIS on the ground.

Man shot, killed in Australian airport

A man was shot dead and two counter-terrorism police were stabbed in a confrontation in Australia's second-largest city on Tuesday, police said.

It was not immediately clear whether the violence was related to a recent call from ISIS to supporters to kill in their home countries.

"Our members had no inkling that this individual posed a threat to them and as far as we were concerned, it was going to be an amicable discussion about that individual's behaviour," Victoria state police Assistant Commissioner Luke Cornelius said.

The man, 18, had been shouting insults about Australian Prime Minister Tony Abbott and the government as a whole before he was shot and killed.

Talko the town: A voice message app

The new voice mail?

People can record a spoken-word message and send it to someone to listen to at any time

Longtime technology guru Ray Ozzie wants to bring back the emotions of the human voice to phones.

His mission began more than two years ago as Ozzie noticed people were increasingly communicating through texts, emails and social media posts instead of calling each other.

"When you see nothing but words and numbers, it becomes very mechanical and very transactional," Ozzie said in an interview.

"But when you hear the sound of someone's voice, it really brings it much closer to home."

Ozzie, 58, Microsoft's former chief software architect, hopes to orchestrate voice's comeback through Talko, a mobile application being released Tuesday for the iPhone. A version for Android phones is expected in a few months.

Talko sends the equivalent of text messages in the form of a spoken word. Talko users can record a voice message and send it over the Internet to anyone else with the app. Recipients listen to the recording when it's convenient, rather than being interrupted by a traditional phone call.

All messages will be stored for 10 days, though users can buy a subscription — expected to be $5 to $9 US per month — to permanently store messages. For the first few months, Talko will store all voice recordings for free.

Another technology industry veteran, Alan Braverman, also is trying to give voices a new outlet on phones. Last week, his San Francisco startup incubator, Giant Pixel, released an iPhone and iPad app called Sobo that offers a vocal twist to Twitter, the popular short-messaging network. Sobo users can record six-second sound bites that are then broadcast to their followers. Braverman is best known as a co-founder of Yammer, a social networking tool for businesses that Microsoft Corp. bought for $1.2 billion in 2012. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Silly kids, this park is for adults

An interactive, glow-in-the-dark playground for adults has been installed in Boston. "Swing Time" is made up of 20 ring-shaped swings which are fitted with micro-controllers which activate LED lighting when the swing moves, illuminating the outdoor space with blue and purple hues that change according to the motion of the seat. Custom-fabricated from welded polypropylene, the swings emit a static white light when inactive. Designed in three different sizes to encourage all of Boston's citizens to interact with the installation, the swings are part of an experimental urban park project and a community laboratory for the Innovation District and South Boston neighbourhoods. AFP/HOWEYER+YOON ARCHITECTURE/JOHN HORNER PHOTOGRAPHY

U.S. 'important' to Nortel's success

It's a fallacy to think of Nortel Networks as just a Canadian company and that its intellectual property was created solely in Canada, a lawyer for its U.S. subsidiary said Tuesday at a cross-border bankruptcy trial that will decide how remaining assets are shared among creditors.

"I think we can all agree now that Nortel was actually a multinational enterprise, global in nature, with separate corporate entities, separate groups of creditors spread around the world," said James Bromley from Wilmington, Del., by videolink.

"The U.S. role was incredibly important, particularly during the glory days ... from the mid-'90s to the 2000s, at which time U.S. R&D was just short of the same amount of R&D that was being conducted in Canada." THE CANADIAN PRESS

RIDING THE SAVE THE RHINO BANDWAGON

On Sunday, a zoo in the Czech Republic set fire to 60 kilograms of rhinoceros horn, a fitting overture to the fifth annual World Rhino Day, which followed in various rhino-aware locales around the world on Monday.

The rhino is being poached to extinction for its horn, which is used in traditional medicine and as an aphrodisiac in Asia.

A rumour going around — that a Vietnamese minister's relative was cured of cancer with rhino horn — hasn't helped.

Hasn't helped the rhino, that is.

At the beginning of the 20th century, there were 500,000 rhinos roaming Africa and Asia.

Today, there are 29,000. In Sumatra, the rhino population is down to less than 100. In Java, there are 35-45 left.

There is some good news, rhino fans.

The southern white rhino has come back, from 50 individuals early in the 20th century to 20,000 today. But now poaching threatens to reverse those gains.

The rhino, in short, is in a sorry state.

Unfortunately, they are not really sexy beasts and Save the Rhino doesn't have the same urgent resonance as Save the Tiger or Save the Whales.

Rhino solidarity

The rhino, in short, is in a sorry state. Unfortunately, they are not really sexy beasts and Save the Rhino doesn't have the same urgent resonance as Save the Tiger or Save the Whales. I'm not sure why I'm feeling such solidarity for the rhinoceros.... Maybe I can relate to its reputation for near-sighted stubbornness. But when you add up the facts, rhinos are worth saving.

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

I'm not sure why I'm feeling such solidarity for the rhinoceros (which means "nose horn," of course).

Maybe I can relate to its reputation for near-sighted stubbornness. But when you add up the facts, rhinos are worth saving:

- Even though they weigh in at a tonne on average, rhinos are vegetarians. They eat anywhere from 50 to 100 kilos of food a day. Trying picking up that grocery bill! Also, what they eat depends on the species.

- There are white rhinos and black rhinos, and both species are actually grey. (Black rhinos eat shoots and leaves, and white rhinos are more grazers. Zoos feed them soy and alfalfa.)

- A group of rhinos is called a "crash."

- Black rhinos are the most aggressive of the species, and they can attack at speeds of 50 km/h. But such attacks are rare and most black rhinos would more typically be found snoozing in the shade.

- The rhino horn is made of the same stuff as human fingernails.

- Rhino moms take 15 months to give birth.

- Rhino babies can walk within 10 minutes.

- Rhinos have notoriously poor eyesight, but there's nothing wrong with their intestines: a white rhino produces about 50 pounds of poo a day.

- Rhinos somehow managed to survive for 40 million years. Then we turned up.

Rhino poaching has grown increasingly alarming.

Last year, more than 1,000 white rhinos were slaughtered in South Africa alone.

Do the math: That's five per cent of the surviving population.

World Rhino Day is over for another year. I'm not sure it's doing any good — South Africa is home to 83 per cent of the world's rhinos, and this year, poachers have already killed 787 rhinos in that country.

If the current rate of poaching continues, rhino deaths will exceed rhino births by 2016 to 2018.

And you know what that means.

'No more stuck skunks!' PETA, college prez urge Ohio students to crush cans

An Ohio college president says the school supports safety for skunks, and for other furry creatures, too.

Miami University President David Hodge has thanked People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals for its offer to send safety posters after a skunk recently got its head stuck in a beer can near a fraternity house. The posters urge people to crush cans for animal safety.

Hodge wrote to PETA to say that the Advocates for Animals student group will work on the poster safety campaign. He says the school appreciates the effort to remind the community to crush and recycle cans, not only to preserve resources but to protect animals from harm.

"We share your desire to have no more stuck skunks!" Hodge wrote.

The posters PETA offered to send to Miami show a raccoon with head stuck in a tin can and tell the reader to crush cans for animal safety, urging: "Don't let this happen again."

Denzel fearless when a moral dichotomy is cast

First among equals.

Denzel Washington is the rare star who has built a career playing dubious characters

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

In 2001 Denzel Washington won his first Best Actor Academy Award. The movie was Training Day and Washington's performance as the corrupt Los Angeles Police Department narcotics officer Alonzo Harris established the actor's propensity for playing ambiguous antiheroes.

Is there another A-list leading man who explores the dark side of his characters as often as Washington? Will Smith and Tom Cruise occasionally let the heroic side of their on-screen personas take a back seat, but Washington revels in mucking around in the mud. From Training Day to American Gangster, Safe House to Flight, he has crafted complex characters you wouldn't want to sit next to on the bus.

This weekend he's back as Robert McCall, home improvement store manager by day, equalizer of odds by night. Based on the cult 1980s television show The Equalizer starring Edward Woodward, the film begins with the former black ops commando trying to leave his violent ways in the past.

He meets his greatest adversary just when he thought

Scan this photo with your Metro news app to watch Denzel Washington and director Antoine Fuqua talk about making The Equalizer. CONTRIBUTED

Exploring the dark side

No other superstar seems as comfortable with moral haziness as Washington.

that part of his life was over. Namely, the Russian mob leans on him after he tries to protect a young woman (Chloë Grace Moretz) from her pimp.

No other superstar seems as comfortable with moral haziness as Washington. In American Gangster, for instance, he was Frank Lucas, the one-time driver for a Harlem mob boss who rose to the top of the drug world by flooding the streets of Manhattan with cheap, high-grade heroin smuggled into the United States in the coffins of dead soldiers returning from Vietnam. He's a dichotomy — bloodthirsty and ruthless, but he also attends church every Sunday with his mother.

In Flight, he played troubled pilot Whip Whitaker, an anti-hero who is functional in day-to-day life despite his predilection for wine, women and cocaine.

He's charming one minute, enraged the next and passed out on the floor the minute after that.

Washington manages to subtly capture the ego and hubris that allows Whitaker to present a sober face to the public while bringing us into the messy world of addiction.

The actor has played his share of assorted good guys over the years — Ricochet's cop-turned-attorney and Don Pedro of Aragon in Much Ado About Nothing — but it is his willingness to mine the heroism of the nasty men he plays that makes him one of the most interesting A-listers.

No more Mr. Knife Guy

Weapons of messy destruction

It's amazing what you can get done with the right tools. In designing the climactic battle in The Equalizer, in which Denzel Washington's retired special ops mystery man takes on a team of Russian mobsters in a Home Depot-like store using just what's available on the shelves, director Antoine Fuqua learned quite a bit about what makes a handy weapon.

"Now in my brain, everything's a weapon. You can do some interesting things, if you think of it that way," Fuqua tells Metro.

When it comes to a topic like this, there's really nothing better than a hands-on demonstration, which Fuqua happily provided using a butter knife just lying around the hotel suite where we met up. "A butter knife is still sharp, so you could still do damage with a butter knife if you cut across somebody's skin," he says, brandishing the blade. "We're fragile, so it's going to cut you. Or a blunt force." To drive the point home, he pretends to jab me several times with the butt of the knife.

"Cut off the blade and you've still got a weapon. It doesn't make a difference, if somebody knows how to do it, they know how to do it," he says. "They're going to use your festival badge lanyard and choke you with it. 'You got a gun? Oh, nice. I've got a butter knife and a corkscrew.'" NED EHRBAR/METRO IN HOLLYWOOD

Leonard Cohen has wanted a cigarette for a long, long time, and now he's going to have one. The legendary singer-songwriter turned 80 this weekend, and to celebrate he's planning to take up smoking again, a habit he kicked when he was in his 50s. "Quite seriously, does anyone know where you can buy a Turkish or Greek cigarette?" he asked, according to the San Francisco Chronicle. "I'm looking forward to that first smoke. I've been thinking about that for 30 years. It's one of the few consistent strings of thoughts I've been able to locate."

According to court documents "obtained" by E! News, the couple is calling it quits over irreconcilable differences and seeking joint custody of their last remaining kid at home, 17-year-old Kylie Jenner. They list the official separation date as June 1, 2013, which is actually pretty noteworthy, since they didn't officially announce it until last October. Do you understand the uncharacteristic levels of restraint and discretion it must've taken them to keep quiet about something for four whole months? That's just not like them.

The creeps come crawling from 4Chan after Emma's gender-equality speech

Well, this is just depressing. Emma Watson's impressive speech on feminism and gender equality at the United Nations Monday was greeted by the murkier corners of the Internet with a sadly predictable response. Posters to the site 4Chan went apoplectic, littering a message board there with insults, threats of violence and doctored news items claiming Watson had died in a hotel room. Most notably, one user threatened to release illegally obtained nude photos of the actress in retaliation for her speech, going so far as to set up a site counting down to the supposed release. Oh, Internet. This is why we can't have nice things.

How-to Avoid getting sick on the plane

1. From the second you board the plane until you are at your destination, never touch your face. Eye and nose rubbing is taboo.
2. Wipe down arm rests and your tray table — especially the latch — with a Wet One. Ignore the looks you might get.
3. Only drink water you can see is coming from a bottle. (The ice is OK.) Never drink the coffee or tea.
4. In the lavatory, use the anti-bacterial gel instead of the soap and water. Or bring your own.
5. Never put anything in the seat pocket in front of you. Avoid over-handling anything that is already in the seat pocket.
6. Forego the dab of antibiotic ointment in the nostrils. It's a myth. DOUG WALLACE/METRO

Last-minute hotel rooms up for grabs each morning

If you don't happen to be a "planner" the HotelTonight app might just be for you. Basically, they sell unsold hotel rooms each morning at 9 a.m. in more than 450 spots globally.

The rooms are categorized into Luxe, Hip, Solid, Basic, Charming and Crashpad, and you can book up to a five-night stay in about 10 seconds — three taps and a swipe.

Good for those on the road, last-minuters, bargain-hunters or hearty partiers — rooms can be booked until 2 a.m. Ten million downloads can't be wrong.

Air Canada Vacations is offering a Game of Thrones-inspired trip to Dublin, where much of the TV show is filmed. In the name of love. Suites for the super rich

From gold-plated iPads to helipads and a diamond ring in lieu of a pillow mint, posh hotels around the world are upping the ante on honeymoon suite perks. Welcome to hotel suites for the one per cent, where tens of thousands of dollars is nothing to spend in the name of love.

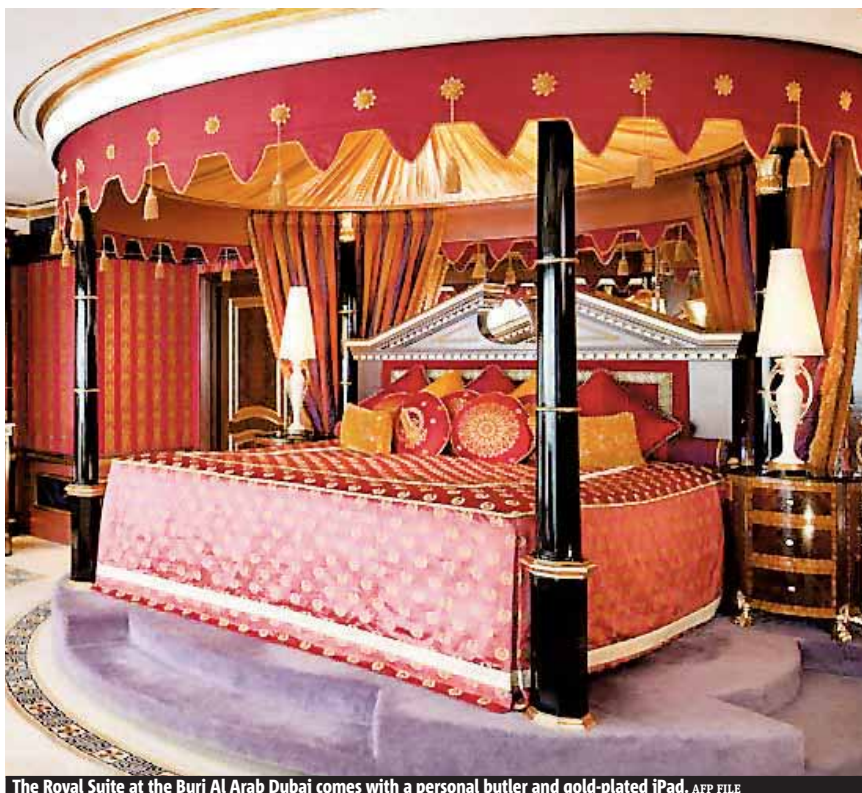

New York Palace

It may sound extravagant to throw in a diamond ring with a hotel reservation, but given that the Jewel Suite at the New York Palace costs $25,000 a night, the ring could be construed as a courtesy amenity.

While some hotels offer their VIP guests a complimentary bottle of bubbly, fruit basket or box of chocolates, the New York Palace comes with a gem worth $2,500, designed by jeweler to the stars Martin Katz.

They'll be exchanging their vows on the same site where Tiger Woods teed off. Instead of a horse-drawn carriage, couples can also hire out an Italian twin engine Augusta 109 aircraft.

InterContinental Geneva

For the sum of a middle-income salary, you too, can book a one-night stay at the world's most expensive hotel suite, The Residence at the InterContinental Geneva. Putting your head down in the 7,000-square foot apartment will set you back $56,000.

With 11 rooms including a library, gallery, hammam, gym and sauna, the apartment is ideal for those who may be feting their wedding with out-of-town guests — along with those couples who may need their space after the festivities. AFP

Sustainability

World Tourism Day gives us a chance to think about how we can travel more responsibly. ISTOCK

Does your travelling make a difference?

ON THE MOVE

Loren Christie
life@metronews.ca

The United Nations has proclaimed September 27 World Tourism Day. I recently spoke with G Adventures founder, Bruce Poon Tip, about the importance and impact of tourism on the planet.

Why is World Tourism Day important?

It's about raising awareness on the positive impact tourism can have in the world. Years ago tourism wasn't seen as either positive or negative. Then about a decade ago climate change became an issue and tourism was seen as a negative thing; plane travel became a big offender in the discussion around carbon emissions. Today, with the importance placed on sustainability and the way people are living at home — recycling, eating organically or using low watt light bulbs — consumers have started to make holiday choices that reflect their values. G Adventures is a firm believer that travel can change the world in a positive way. It's a symbiotic relationship between travelers and local people. Travel can be a form of giving back, just like donating to a charity as long as it's done right.

What is standing in the way of tourism becoming a positive force?

All-inclusive holidays are growing at an alarming rate. There is a race to build bigger and bigger cruise ships. Seventy-five percent of travelers are going to all-inclusives and very little of that money is going into the local economy. People are choosing their holidays based on price point and locals are not benefitting. The United Nations Environment program says that for every hundred dollars spent by tourists, only five dollars actually stays in the local economy.

How can your travel choices make a difference?

Understand where your money is going. Learn about the differences being promoted by travel companies and pick out the things that match your values. Sustainable tourism is about local jobs and local people and benefitting local economies.

Why Georgia should be on the golfer's mind

Reynolds Plantation.

Carved through the pine tree covered hills in the state's lake country, this resort boasts plenty of public access courses

BRIAN KENDALL
canadiangolfttraveller.com

Georgia isn't the first choice of most Canadians for a golf getaway.

But thanks largely to the growing fame of Reynolds Plantation, one of North America's biggest and most attractive golf resorts, that may soon change.

The sprawling lakefront resort midway between Atlanta and Augusta will be in the spotlight later this month when it hosts the Golf Channel's Big Break Invitational, Reynolds Plantation. Part of the network's popular Big Break franchise, the live-to-air 72-hole competition between past champions will showcase the charms of a planned community that includes six golf courses and the luxurious Ritz-Carlton Lodge.

Four of the courses at Reynolds Plantation have been extensively renovated by owner MetLife, including Great Waters, the Jack Nicklaus-designed headliner, which will host the Big Break competition.

Great Waters features a spectacular routing through a rolling pine forest and ends with eight holes that snake dramatically along the shore of Lake Oconee.

Reynolds Plantation offers more activities than just golf.

Rounding out the roster are layouts by several of the game's top architects: The National (Tom Fazio), The Oconee (Rees Jones), as well as The Landing and The Plantation (both by Bob Cupp). Only The Creek Club by Jim Engh is off-limits to resort guests. A 120-kilometre drive east of Atlanta, Reynolds Plantation is ideally situated for exploring Georgia's Lake Country, a region rich in Southern charm and history that includes the towns of Greensboro, Eatonton and Madison. Greensboro, named for Revolutionary War general Nathanael Greene, was rebuilt after being burned to the ground and its inhabitants killed by Creek Indians.

But there's plenty to do without leaving a 4,046-hectare property that offers a spa and fitness centre, as well as water activities ranging from bass fishing to kayaking and water skiing. Biking and hiking trails provide glimpses of deer, red fox and bald eagles.

Tourists should also stay on the lookout for celebrities such as George W. Bush, Newt Gingrich and John Mellencamp known to frequent the palatial homes that overlook manmade — but astonishingly natural looking — Lake Oconee. Country music star Carrie Underwood married Canadian hockey player Mike Fisher under a tent here in 2010.

Though a family destination, the focus at Reynolds Plantation is squarely on golf. Last April, the resort hosted a heavily publicized exhibition between Sergio Garcia and Justin Rose that featured holes 15 inches wide, an innovation promoted as a way to make the game easier to play. Also found here is a high-tech TaylorMade-Adidas club-fitting centre, where visitors can have their clubs customized in the same equipment trailer that once serviced the pros on the PGA Tour.

And on hand at the Reynolds Golf Academy is acclaimed instructor Charlie King. A noted innovator, he believes that instruction must be adapted for each individual. If King can't help your game, it might be time to find a course with 15-inch holes.

P.E.I. road trip. A relaxed journey around Canada's smallest province is a welcome break for this city dweller

Sometimes the city boy needs to rest and relax by escaping from the hustle and bustle and adventuring through a place where calm meets quiet and a vacation actually leaves you feeling refreshed.

My four-day road trip through Prince Edward Island would be my first visit to the East Coast.

In 2013 P.E.I. was featured in Travel + Leisure's annual World's Best List and awarded Top Island in the Continental U.S. and Canada. It is the nation's smallest province and also the easiest to explore.

I zig-zagged through potato farm-flanked rural roads and soared across petite bays where lobster fishermen eagerly hauled in the day's catch.

While the big draws here are of course pigtailed Anne of Green Gables, epic lobster feasts and lighthouse-dotted shorelines, it's the warm welcome and country charm that will leave the most lasting impression.

West Point Lighthouse Inn offers 13 rooms with fantastic views, two of which are located inside the historic lighthouse. At 69 feet tall, it's one of P.E.I.'s tallest, and the only offering for those looking to sleep in a historic lighthouse.

It's surrounded by pristine red sandy beaches and the rolling Cedar Dunes. Known throughout Canada for its farm-to-table philosophy and innovative use of P.E.I. products, the Inn at Bay Fortune is both a bou-

Magical Montenegro

A week in this tiny country in southeastern Europe will feel like a month. Montenegro has a bit of everything — beaches, mountains, rapids, freshwater lakes, breathtaking scenery, old ruins and maybe some new friends. From the capital of Podgorica, rent a car and head to the Adriatic Sea, setting yourself up in one of the many cool apartments in the towns that dot the coast. Then, you can drive through places like Bar and Budva, Prznno and Sveti Stefan, drinking in the scenery. Visit Montenegro.travel.

Easy peasy pasta

Ricotta Pea Pasta. This cheesy dish takes no time to make and it will disappear just as fast

DINNER EXPRESS
Emily Richards
food@metronews.ca

I love making recipes that I enjoyed as a kid for my own family.

Ricotta cheese is used in many Italian dishes to create sauces, add texture to pasta and, of course, to make desserts.

I enjoy adding it to pasta with veggies — even as simple as peas.

Like most pasta dishes, this one does not wait. When it's ready, you should be, too! Serve it right away and have everyone at the table with their forks in hand.

Planning meals ahead and having pantry staples will help balance out your week and get you ahead for special snacks as well.

Whip up this easy week-night meal and then you will have time to make some homemade cannoli for dessert, using an extra ricotta you may have laying around.

1. In a large pot of boiling salted water, cook the rotini or other short pasta for 6 minutes.

2. Add the frozen peas and cook for 2 minutes or until pasta is al dente. Drain the pasta, ensuring that you reserve 1 cup (250 mL) of the cooking water and return

3. Add the ricotta cheese, extra virgin olive oil and some of the water to moisten and toss to combine until smooth sauce forms.

4. Add half of the Parmesan cheese and fresh, chopped parsley or basil; toss the mixture to combine. Sprinkle with remaining Parmesan before serving immediately.

Ingredients

- 12 oz (375 g) rotini or other short pasta
- 1 cup (250 mL) frozen peas
- 1 tub (454 g to 475 g) ricotta cheese
- 2 tbsp (30 mL) extra virgin

- 3 tbsp (45 mL) chopped fresh Italian parsley or basil

Employers, remember my name!

Building a personal brand. Stand out from that sky-high stack of CVs by changing the way recruiters see you

LAUREN MARINIGH
TalentEgg.ca

A personal brand is an invaluable tool that can help you throughout your career — particularly when you're trying to land a first job or move between industries.

Personal branding can be crucial in helping sell yourself to potential employers and stand out from the crowd. Luckily, getting started on developing your brand is easier than it might sound.

Create a theme or image for yourself

Choose a theme that will be carried throughout both your online and offline presence. This theme may include a series of colours, fonts, and images that will be used across all platforms.

Consistency is key for branding: Use the same colours on your resumé and cover letter as on your Twitter profile and personal website. When you move from document to portfolio to resumé, or to Twitter and LinkedIn, everything should reflect a consistent visual message.

Build your online presence

Having an online presence is crucial for any modern job-seeker, and absolutely vital when it comes to presenting your personal brand.

While you'll need to use and present your personal brand in your offline life and in the workplace, having your brand online is an excellent way to put yourself out there — and it may lead someone to contact you to offer a top job opportunity or networking connection.

As you build your presence online, be sure to be actively involved in the online community. Don't just create profiles — follow, like and join, too.

Generate content

A great way to develop and fine-tune your personal brand is to produce content that reflects your areas of expertise. This content may appear on your blog, your social networks or shared directly with others in your industry. You can even identify promising conversations that focus on your chosen area and offer your content there — building new connections in the process. Generating unique content and contributing to ongoing discussions will help build your image.

Build yourself offline

Your offline professional activities play a big part in introducing specific people to your personal brand (and directing them to your online presence, as well). Networking and building an image for yourself offline are key steps to building your brand. Create branded business cards, and attend conferences, classes, workshops, and other events to give you an opportunity to network.

Success in banking takes certain skills

MATHEWS

The world of banking is a hot-spot for recent graduates interested in hatching a top career.

The industry has diverse career offerings, but making your way will call for a pivotal combination of hard and soft skills.

Here are four important skills and traits that employers look for in a prospective employee. These qualities aren't just a career-hatching asset — they'll also ensure your continued success as a new professional.

Industry knowledge

Banking requires a high level of finance and industry knowledge.

Successful banking professionals will need to be intimately familiar with the regulations that govern banking in Canada.

Moreover, aspiring individuals should not limit their knowledge base to the banking industry. Just as banking is vital to the economy, so too is the economy vital to banking.

Aspiring banking professionals should build their knowledge base in all aspects related to banking, banking regulation, finance and the economy.

This level of analytical rigour, the product of intellectual curiosity, lends itself well to innovation.

ada continues to evolve, which means regulations do as well. Banking professionals are expected not only to have a sound knowledge base, but being constantly aware of new changes within the industry, as well as the regulations.

Analytical thinking and entrepreneurial spirit

The banking industry is primarily concerned with risk management. Successful banking professionals excel at managing risk precisely because of their analytical rigour. Banking requires incredibly strong lateral and analytical thinking.

The hockey sweater visits the ballpark

Alex Ovechkin wore flip-flops and a borrowed pair of baseball pants as the Washington Capitals unveiled their Winter Classic sweaters for January's outdoor game against the Chicago Blackhawks at Nationals Park in Washington. Capitals owner Ted Leonsis said Tuesday that he lobbied NHL commissioner Gary Bettman to host the event from the moment the puck dropped for the first Winter Classic in 2008. Pompey belts his first homer as Jays sink Mariners Canadian Dalton Pompey hit his first career home run and Edwin Encarnacion added a two-run blast as the Toronto Blue Jays crushed the Seattle Mariners 10-2 on Tuesday night at Rogers Centre.

Pompey belted a no-doubt shot to deep right field off Felix Hernandez to kick off Toronto's seven-run fifth inning. Encarnacion went deep in the following frame to help make a winner of Blue Jays starter R.A. Dickey, who allowed five hits over seven innings.

Nylander scores in pre-season debut

William Nylander created and got some opportunities and showed flashes of offensive skill in his pre-season NHL debut.

Time will tell if he's ready for full-time duty at hockey's highest level, but Nylander scored a late goal and was noticeable in positive ways in the Toronto Maple Leafs' 4-0 victory over the Philadelphia Flyers on Tuesday night at Air Canada Centre.

Past stars weigh in on personal conduct policy

NFL commissioner Roger Goodell and chief assistant Troy Vincent have met with 11 former NFL players to discuss ways to improve the league's personal conduct policy.

The NFL has faced heavy criticism of its personal conduct policy after incidents this year involving Ray Rice, Adrian Peterson, Greg Hardy, Ray McDonald and Jonathan Dwyer. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Leafs bring home a world of experience

Playing meaningful games. Kadri, Rielly, Reimer, Gardiner more seasoned after playing in world championship

When the Toronto Maple Leafs' season ended with 12 losses in 14 games and without a play-off berth, Nazem Kadri, Jake Gardiner, James Reimer and Morgan Rielly flew 14,000 kilometres away to escape their troubles.

Actually, they flew to Minsk, Belarus, to play at the world hockey championship. Canada (Kadri, Rielly and Reimer) and the United States (Gardiner) both lost in the quarter-finals, but those Leafs players benefited from the game action.

"It's pretty long but it's a great experience," Gardiner said. "Naz went over there, Mo and Reims. I'm glad we got the chance to do that."

Reimer found some value in continuing to play into the spring while the Stanley Cup playoffs were ongoing.

"I know talking to other guys who have done it, when you go for those long runs in the playoffs, you have some experience playing some meaningful games or pressure games later in the summer," he said.

Reimer added with a wry grin: "It's great to get that experience so that when we go on our long cup run, we'll be ready."

Reimer, who helped carry the Leafs into the playoffs in 2013 and whose struggles contributed to the season-defining slide last spring, split the duties for Canada with former Toronto teammate Ben Scrivens and got to build some confidence back up.

"It's a little more relaxed," the 26-year-old said. "You're kind of getting away from the pressures of the NHL, per se, and you're playing for your country having fun."

Rielly saw limited minutes but got some power-play duty. It's a role he could continue to blossom into in his second season in Toronto.

and Troy Brouwer. As he tries to become a better all-around centre in the NHL, it didn't hurt to learn a thing or two from coach Dave Tippett.

"We had some conversations. Obviously he's a great coach and his resumé says so," Kadri said. "I had a lot to learn, and by all means do I have everything figured out? I don't. I've still got a lot to learn and I'm still 23 years old and that is really what I want to add to my game: Becoming the whole package and being able to play in all three zones."

Under new Nashville Predators coach Peter Laviolette, Gardiner played almost 18 minutes a game with the U.S. As he continues to grow at 25, it was a test facing elite international competition.

For Reimer, the benefit stretched beyond the games.

"Just with all those guys there, they're all great players, they're all great shooters and to get that practice every day with those guys it really brings your game up," Reimer said.

Phase 1 of BMO Field renos begins

Ground broken. TFC's home undergoing facelift to get 'back to the top of the MLS stadium category'

Renovations are underway at BMO Field, with a light being left on at the construction zone if money can be found to shoe-horn in the Toronto Argonauts.

First up is a $105-million facelift to a bare-bones stadium built on a $62.5-million shoe-string as part of the deal to bring the 2007 FIFA U-20 World Cup and MLS to Canada.

"It became really obvious to us that we were taking a backdoor in Major League Soccer relative to our facilities, even in a seven-year-old building," Bob Hunter, chief facilities and live entertainment officer at MLSE, said after the ceremonial groundbreaking Tuesday.

"This is going to take us back to the top of the MLS sta-

Toronto FC update

- Toronto FC is looking for a new jersey sponsor. BMO has opted not to renew the rights it has owned since 2007. The current agreement runs out Dec. 31.

dium category," he added.

Phase 1, to be completed by May 2015, will see the capacity raised to 30,000 with 8,500 new seats plus additional washrooms and concessions, in the East stand. A larger video board will replace the existing screen while new suites and premium areas will be added.

MLSE can add another 10,000 temporary seats, which it hopes will be enough to bring a Winter Classic to Toronto.

Phase 2, slated to start next

September and end in May 2016, will see the addition of a canopy covering all seats with the exception of the North stand, as well as a new sound and lighting system.

MLSE, which owns the MLS team and runs the city-owned stadium, is putting in $95 million to help pay for the first two phases. The city is kicking in $10 million, which MLSE will repay with interest over 20 years.

Phase 3 is where the Argos come in, with a plan to reconfigure the field to accommodate the CFL.

Cost of all three phases is going to be $125 million, with MLSE looking for the provincial and federal governments to contribute $10 million apiece. That has yet to happen, so Phase 3 is on hold.

There is a time concern. The Argos have a lease at Rogers Centre through 2017. But that deal can't be renewed, meaning they must find a new home for the 2018 campaign.

FIFA VP calls for publishing of probe

Prince Ali's plea to lift FIFA secrecy rules shrouding the case — which could punish Garcia, the American independent prosecutor appointed by FIFA, also wants to ease confidentiality rules that prohibit publishing his reports and evidence files.

2014 Scion xB

- Type. Four-door, front-wheel-drive compact wagon
- Engine. 2.4-litre four-cylinder (158 hp)
- Transmissions. Five-speed manual or four-speed automatic
- Base price. $18,960

Market position

Aimed at younger buyers, Scion picks up its share of older ones as well. But many of its models have undergone only minor changes over the years, and sales are falling.

Points

- Fifty of the Release Series 10.0 cars come with Electric Pearl paint, a glossy white that reveals a shimmering green accent in sunlight.
- Available options for the xB include a front brace, rear sway bar, and larger brakes from Toyota's TRD performance division; plus heated leather seats.
- All 2014 Scion models now include touch-screen stereo.

The dash is plain, but the controls are easy to use.

Interesting features

Tire-pressure monitoring system, heated mirrors with turn signal indicators, 6.1-inch touch screen, front LED accent lights, electronic brake force distribution.

Thirsty toaster peppy and fun

Review. Scion's xB tall wagon is aimed at younger buyers, but all drivers like its roomy interior and easy access

JIL MCINTOSH
drive@metronews.ca

In 2010, Canadians were finally introduced to Scion, the entry-level brand that Toyota debuted in the United States seven years earlier.

Scion models such as its tall-wagon xB hatchback were aimed at a younger market, with their lower prices and funky styling, but they attracted older buyers as well, who liked their roomy interiors and ease of entry.

Dubbed The Toaster by fans for its boxy styling, the xB uses a 2.4-litre four-cylinder engine that can be ordered with a five-speed manual transmission for $18,960, or with a four-speed automatic for $19,980.

Scion models come in a single trim line, with several factor or dealer options.

My tester had the limited-edition Release Series 10.0

package, which comes only with the automatic transmission and includes a backup camera, special interior trim, unique wheel covers, wireless device charging, and way-cool illumination that projects "xB RS 10.0" on the driver's side of the floor, and a limited-edition number on the passenger's side. But it's a pricey package, at $2,585.

The xB is surprisingly peppy, with lots of passing power on the highway. It's fun to drive, thanks to its quick and direct steering, substantial feel, and a very tight turning circle.

However, it's very noisy — the doors close with a tinny sound, and bumps in the road boom inside the cabin — and that peppiness costs at the pumps. It's officially rated at 8.4 L/100 km in combined driving, thirstier than a six-cylinder Toyota Camry. In real-world use, I only averaged 10.5 L/100 km.

The seats are comfortable, and visibility is excellent all around. The dash is plain but the controls are easy to use — although it takes a bit to get used to the centrally mounted instrument cluster.

The rear seats are easy to fold flat to increase the cargo space. That great interior space is a plus, along with its price and the way it drives. If only it could control its fuel thirst, it could be an entry-level winner all around.

Shift: From hybrids, technology, new vehicles and the environment, to saving money at the pumps

Ford shows its love for EV-driving employees

Not to be outdone by rivals Nissan and General Motors who have begun building electric-vehicle infrastructure for their employees who drive electric vehicles, Ford and Detroit utility DTE Energy will build a solar collection canopy over hundreds of parking spaces at its Dearborn, Mich., headquarters. When completed early next year, it will be Michigan's largest solar array, says Ford, providing 360 spaces and 30 charging stations for plug-in electrics. The solar canopy will collect enough energy to power 150 average-sized homes. Ford expects it to offset about 800,000 kilograms of carbon dioxide emissions per year. DTE Energy will run the facility as part of Ford's goal to generate 10 per cent of its energy from renewable resources by next year.

ALL STORIES AND PHOTOS FROM WHEELBASEMEDIA.COM

Ford will build a large solar array at its Michigan headquarters so employees can charge their electric cars.

Portable solar charger follows the sun

Made in the United States, powered by the sun and designed for the Fiat 500e, the EV Arc is the first transportable solar-powered electric-vehicle charging station. It fits inside a parking space and stores the sun's energy in on-board batteries. Built-in sensors and motors allow it to follow the sun across the sky, to generate up to 25 per cent more electricity than a fixed array. It can charge two Fiat 500e compact electric cars at a time and although it is transportable, that requires a pickup truck. San Diego dealership Kearny Mesa Fiat uses the technology to offer guests free charging and the opportunity to "drive on sunshine." The Fiat 500e is now available, but so far only in California and Oregon.

A new type of portable charging station for the Fiat 500e actually follows the sun across the sky.

Shift points

- California is considering pairing two programs to establish a steady source of funding for the state's clean-vehicle rebate program. Owners who trade in gas-guzzling clunkers on a new or used electric car would receive vouchers to offset the added cost of electric vehicles.
- Starting later this year, models of the Chevrolet Silverado and GMC Sierra full-size pickup trucks will get an all-new eight-speed automatic transmission. In a more glamorous application, the same transmission has already debuted, in the 2015 Corvette.
- Ford is planning a new line of hybrid vehicles to compete with Toyota's popular Prius series, reports Reuters. Like the Prius, Ford's new hybrid will come in different configurations ranging from garden-variety hybrids to plug-ins, and will have been designed from scratch as a hybrid.

Ford's three-cylinder engine has proven popular with buyers.

Volvo to offer three-cylinder options

Are you just now getting used to the idea of four-cylinder engines? What say you then to driving on just three cylinders? Led by Ford and its 1.0-litre EcoBoost turbo-charged engine, three-cylinder technology is an option being explored by a growing number of manufacturers, from builders of high-end sports and luxury cars to those who make cars for the masses. The latest to get aboard the three-cylinder bandwagon is Volvo. Already considered to be doing quite well on fuel efficiency in its vehicles, the Swedish automaker confirmed plans to offer Drive-E turbo triples on a wide range of its models, not just for Europe and overseas markets, but for North America as well.

CAFE regulations are enlightening auto makers

The new phrase "lightweighting" is sweeping the automotive industry as it moves toward more sustainable design.

It's the next most popular path, after powertrain improvements, that auto-makers will take to meet U.S. Corporate Average Fuel Economy (CAFE) standards starting in 2017, says a new WardsAuto survey of automotive engineers and designers.

Almost half the 900 respondents said their companies are focused on "lightweighting" and the use of lightweight structural materials to meet the new regulations that will grow increasingly stringent through 2025.

Engine efficiency, electric powertrains and diesel technology were the next choices.

New Audi R8 line to offer diesel, electric variants

A revised and updated Audi R8 sports car will bow next year with more than just a fetching new look. In addition to the eight- and 10-cylinder gasoline-burning engines it has used since its 2007 inception, expect Audi to offer two variants that will appeal to the conservation crowd. A new diesel-powered R8 is under consideration, suggests Green Car Reports, as is the on-again, off-again R8 E-tron which, says Automobile magazine, promises a range of 500 kilometres — about double that of the prototype model shown last year. The electric R8 "is still part of the program ... Audi now believes (it) can offer the performance and range its buyers expect," the magazine reports.

Audi experimented with a diesel version of the R8 several years ago, but that was about the extent of it.

Fast and capable, but V-worthy?

Special delivery. New Cadillac CTS Vsport is bigger inside and out, but less powerful than its V-tagged predecessor

I know I'm supposed to like this car. I liked the old CTS a lot, so it just makes sense to like the new one.

But with the new ATS also in the family as the entry model, the CTS has grown a bit in size and price. Those are two things about the new car that I really don't like.

Garry doesn't seem to care about that as he steps out from the cockpit. He coaxes me to the front of the car for the light show of the century. He's like a kitten chasing a laser pointer.

"Look at all that going on."

Pretty cool.

Growing a little larger gives the impression that the car is somehow fatter and lazier than before. That's subjective, but what has me rather intrigued is the Vsport name. There's no getting around comparing it to the previous CTS-V. The V in the name is a promise of big and impressive things.

Or is it?

Yes, the Vsport's twin-turbocharged 3.6-litre V6 makes 420 horsepower, but that's nowhere near the 556 that was in the previous CTS-V, which was also smaller and a more athletic-looking car, with the fender lips stretched over the wheels, like a dentist prying at your cheek to do a root canal.

Do a walk-around and it looks like the CTS Vsport is in fact two different cars sewn together at the midpoint. The front is as fantastic and stunning (just ask Garry) as the tail end is plump, with its chunky C pillar and rather long overhang.

Jekyll and Hyde

The front end of the CTS Vsport is fantastic and stunning.

The tail end is plump, with chunky pillars and a rather long overhang.

And the 18-inch wheels and tires look, well, puny on a ride this big.

The inside is interesting, since it's a cosy fit for a car that projects quite a bit more size than before. It's about 10 centimetres longer than the old CTS, with much of that room benefitting rear passengers.

As for the instruments, there actually are none. Everything — and I mean everything — appears on a display screen. You can imagine the design flexibility this provides and I expect this will become the way of the world in the next few years.

Here, there are four gauge layouts to choose from.

There's plenty of quality work inside with a mish-mash of carbon-fibre trim, suede, shiny plastic, leather, chrome and various stitching techniques.

The mostly buttonless centre stack is instead adorned with touch-sensitive controls, which have slowish reaction speed and will require removing gloves in winter to operate. Me, I like old-school buttons.

But the real question is whether this car lives up to the V in its name. With its standard eight-speed automatic transmission, it runs to 100 km/h in about 4.7 seconds, and corners somewhere around 0.95 Gs, which is in sports-car territory.

The throttle response is nowhere near the CTS-V's, with its supercharged Corvette engine. That's to be expected, but the twin-turbo

Eyes front

- Wow. Front styling, front light show, muscle-y looking front — there's a theme here. Smooth power, fake gauges that look like the real thing, rear-seat leg room, surprising turning grip.
- Hmm. Rear wheels too far forward, so-so rear styling, wheels look small, touch-sensitive centre stack goes too far, $25,000 more than the base CTS?

V6 is also better on fuel if you drive in a civilized manner (13.5 L/100 km city and 8.4 highway).

The ultimate question might not even be up to the Vsport to answer, since a higher-performing model is apparently in the works.

And that's a load off for the Vsport, which can instead be a fast and capable $76,000 family sedan — with a great light show, of course.

How do you describe the opposite of beige?

Quieter, refined third-gen Sorento unveiled in Paris

Paris Motor Show.

Korean automaker also reveals restyled Rio with an updated interior and new navigation system

Kia will stage the European premiere of its third-generation Sorento SUV at the Paris Motor Show, in addition to presenting the restyled Rio sub-compact city car, restyled Venga mini MPV and Optima T-Hybrid concept.

Unveiled in South Korea in August, the new Sorento offers a more refined style and a quieter ride than the outgoing version.

The front of the new SUV stands out for its elongated, wraparound headlights, larger fog lights and oversized tiger nose grille, which resembles the one seen on Kia's 2013 Cross GT concept.

On the inside, the cargo capacity has been expanded to 605 litres from 515 when the seats are folded down. There is also a new storage compartment built into the floor of the trunk.

The current trend in the premium SUV segment is to increase luxury and refinement, as seen in the latest Volvo XC90, which will also be on display in Paris.

The new Sorento is no exception, particularly on the interior, with its sleek instrument panel and details in leather and other high-end materials.

Kia is also touting a reduction in noise and vibration, due to the increased thickness of the dashboard soundproof panel and larger mounts for the engine and transmission.

The result, according to the Korean carmaker, is a 3 to 6 per cent decrease in noise and vibration within the cabin.

Available as a five- or seven-seater, the Sorento will offer a choice of five engines, ranging in output from 172 to 270 hp.

Kia has also given a facelift to the Rio, its best-selling model worldwide, and to the Europe-only Venga mini MPV, both of which now feature the distinctive tiger nose grille at the front.

Inside the cabin, the Rio has been updated with chrome accents and with the new Kia navigation system, accessible through a seven-inch screen.

The Venga has a new central console, a new stereo system and, as an option, a heated steering wheel.

The Rio will be available with engines ranging from 75 to 109 hp, paired with a five- or six-speed manual or four-speed automatic transmissions.

Also in Paris, Kia will present its T-Hybrid concept, powered by the engine of the current Optima (a 1.7-litre CRDi turbodiesel) paired with an electric motor powered by a 48-volt battery.

The auto maker intends to use this powertrain to develop future models.

The new Sorento and Rio models are expected to arrive here in early 2015. There is no word on whether the popular Venga will be available in North America. It is currently only sold in Europe. AFP

Insert design, press print

Autopilot. 3D printer produces a driveable car in just 44 hours, although some assembly is required

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

As far as printing jobs go, this one was on the long side — about 44 hours.

But that's understandable, because the printer wasn't just spitting out an English essay or directions from MapQuest. It was a very large 3D printer, and it made a car.

Well, not a complete car, but the complete body of a car. And a completely useable one, too. In fact, it's already moving under its own (electrical) power.

It is the brainchild of Local Motors, a design firm based in Arizona. To prove the point that building 3D cars is both fast and requires considerably fewer parts than a conventional vehicle, Local Motors decided to print the car body, and then attach the 50 or so parts needed to make it run — all in front of a trade-show crowd at the recent International Technology Show in Chicago.

If that's not enough, Local Motors expects the car, called Strati, to go on sale to the U.S. public some time in 2015, priced between $18,000 and $30,000.

Of course, it has yet to pass any crash tests. And, as currently conceived, it would fall under the "neighbourhood" vehicle classification. Strati is a low-speed, two-seat city car that's bigger and better than a golf cart, but not designed for highway use.

Fitted with the electric powertrain from a Renault Twizy, the Strati can go about 100 kilometres on a full charge, and tops out at 80 km/h.

Let's get back to how it was built, with that 3D printer.

Local Motors asked for design proposals that would be printer-friendly, and eventually selected one from Italian designer Michael Anoe. The design sketch was turned into a 3D computer image.

Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Tennessee supplied its large 3D printer for the event and somebody pressed the "go" button.

Instead of toner ink, the printer was fed a finely ground mixture of thermoplastic and carbon fibre. The printer nozzle precisely applied the mixture, one small layer at a time. Even with all those layers, the finished product looks, and is, one piece.

A specially made router was used to smooth the edges of the car for aesthetics, and to prepare other sections to accept the mounting hardware.

The post-print assembly took about two days. Local Motors said the opportunity to print many components right into the main body made the overall build simpler, and reduced the number of individual parts.

The complete car has only 40 to 50 parts, compared to a conventional vehicle that has several hundred. (Although let's not forget that the Strati is lacking a few things conventional cars usually offer, such as a roof.)

The printing process also allows for lots of individuality, design possibilities and colour options. It's more or less a case of "insert design, press go."

Local Motors is touting this 3D technology as an industry game changer, which will seriously compress the time it takes to go from simple sketch to finished vehicle.

Using thermoplastic and carbon fibre, a 3D printer created the complete body for this electric car. CONTRIBUTED

Honda VFR800. Sexy new compact cuddler proves a bit less exciting when the traffic gets a bit rough

MARISSA BAECKER
drive@metronews.ca

The Honda VFR has a long history of being a fan favourite. Since its debut as a V4-750 cc, the VFR has garnered attention. So much so, that changing it was a risky venture for Honda.

But any fears were unfounded, as Honda updated the bike's style reduced its weight by 10 kilograms and added features such as adjustable seat height, traction control, ABS, heated grips and self-cancelling signals.

The changes put the 2014 model at the top of my list for desired test rides, and I managed to get my hands around the bars of one for a quick road trip to a mid-summer rock concert.

"Now that's a sexy bike!" I thought as I arrived to pick up the VFR800. But while the good looks may draw you in, it's the ride that will keep you there.

I admit that taking to the highway on a Friday afternoon wasn't the best decision, as Vancouver's outdoor enthusiasts were proudly towing most of their recreational belongings out of the city for the weekend.

My wimpy grip was put to the test in an exercise of clutch control during heavy rush-hour traffic, which didn't see my digital gear change out of third or my speedo go past 60 km/h for about 100 km of the Trans Canada.

After nearly two-and-a-half hours, I pulled into the Chevron gas station in Hope, where there was barely room for a motorcycle to squeeze between all the campers and cars.

Although the compact rider triangle of the VFR initially excited me, I found myself cursing this cuddler after two hours of Friday afternoon gridlock. My hips, wrists, shoulders and knees were practically locked in place. Who did I think I was? Some 20-year-old spry athlete? I still had three hours' travel ahead and I was already fatigued.

As I sat on the lawn working out the cramps in my calves and sucking back Gatorade to replenish my fluids, I admired a relaxed-looking Harley rider saddling up.

Back on the road, I continued south toward a blackened skyline just as Mother Nature started a light show.

"Oh that's just great!" I thought, as I considered pulling over, but a thumbs-up from riders headed in the opposite direction told me it wasn't as bad as it looked, so I persevered.

As liquid polka dots decorated the blacktop below me, I thought about the traction control. When the sky opened up, and the road reflected oil, surface grit and flashes of light, my wrist rolled off the throttle but the Honda didn't waiver. I anticipated tire movement but stayed strong and consistent for the next 20 kilometres, until I came out the other side of the storm — soaked, but still upright.

At 527 pounds, I initially considered the VFR800 to be heavy. But that extra weight was welcome when the wind picked up as I crested the mountain and began my descent into the Okanagan.

As I pulled into the lot at the South Okanagan Event Centre in Penticton, I immediately caught the attention of a group of enthusiastic roadies — proving that the full-fairing VFR800 in pearl white (also in red) appeals to both men and women.

After parking my ride alongside the Alice in Chains tour buses, I answered a few questions and then left the ogling crowd circling my bike — as I headed inside just in time to catch the grand finale of the rock show.

The heavy Honda VFR was rock solid in a summer storm. MARISSA BAECKER

Dash cams detect illicit phone calls

Busted. Students in Brazil create warning system that can tell when driver's on phone

A dedicated dashboard camera could soon trigger a warning to drivers who use their phone behind the wheel.

Developed by researchers at the University of Santa Catarina in Brazil, the solution was recently highlighted by MIT Technology Review.

Created by five university students, the system is based on a camera that looks for signs the driver is talking on the phone. There are several indicators, such as the position of the driver's face (eyes, cheeks, ears), which point to phone use.

The system processes the images taken in three steps: face detection, evaluation of the position of certain pixels, and calculation of the probability that the driver is actually on the phone. A high probability triggers an alert, which could take the form of a loud noise or a simple warning message.

The algorithm works on video sequences of 15 frames per second at a resolution of between 320 and 240 pixels.

The prototype is about 90 per cent accurate on the whole, although the researchers noted that certain lighting conditions led to less reliable results. And the system can only detect standard phone calling, not the use of a hands-free system or other mobile-device usage such as reading and writing text messages or emails.

It remains to be seen whether consumers or automakers might buy into the idea, which could potentially be more of an annoyance than a help.

Talking on the phone while driving greatly increases the likelihood of an accident, and the use of handheld phones is now banned in every Canadian province and many American states. AFP

Tesla joins race for driverless car

Electric carmaker Tesla is developing exciting technology that could see vehicles run on full auto pilot in as little as six years, according to chief executive Elon Musk.

He said his firm is stepping in the race against rivals such as Google and Volvo to create a driverless car.

"The overall system and software will be programmed by Tesla, but we will certainly use sensors and subcomponents from many companies," Musk told reporters in Tokyo.

"I think, in the long term, all Tesla cars will have auto-pilot capability."

There are no self-driving cars yet, but several makers are working on autonomous or semi-autonomous features, such as self-parking, which are seen as a major advance for the auto sector. AFP
